

The Tin Goose Diner is a stainless steel restaurant built by the Jerry O'Mahony Diner Company of Elizabeth, New Jersey in 1951. Operated as Steve's Diner, then later as the Sunrise Diner, the restaurant thrived until closing in the early 2000's. The diner was purchased by the Liberty Aviation Museum, meticulously restored, and moved to the current location in 2012.

The Tin Goose Diner operates as a functional museum exhibit. Our patrons are reminded of a bygone era where locals gathered in a friendly setting to discuss family and friends, sports, and current events over a cup of coffee or a hearty meal.

The Liberty Aviation Museum/Tin Goose Diner is a 501 C3 not for profit organization. Each time you have a cup of coffee or meal at the Diner, 100% of the profits go toward supporting the Museum, its daily operations, exhibits, and restorations.

We thank you for your patronage and help preserving and perpetuating our rich local, state, and national history.
